Intro

Kentish Fire are an infectious upbeat indie-disco outfit from Camden. Presenting themselves as a sonic militia, they deliver charged energetic performances, fuelled with brash guitar riffs, overdriven staccato synths, pumped-up bass lines and heaving stop-start rhythms.

A cross between Foals, LCD Soundsystem, The Ting Tings and The B-52s, their mix of disco, electro, rock and pop gives them the ability to whip any audience into a fired-up frenzy.

Bio

Frustrated with the fashion for lacklustre performance on the hipster gig circuit, Kentish Fire formed in 2009 with the express intention of bucking this trend. Former DJs Warren Gebhardt and Andrew "Snakes" Louis joined forces with indie-frontman Michael "Inky" Inkpen and promoter/songwriter Anna Gregson to produce music and shows that get people buzzing.

They stormed onto the music scene headlining club nights at London venues such as Proud Camden, Notting Hill Arts Club and The Barfly, with additional appearances at O2 Academy Islington, The Borderline, Madame Jojo's, The Lexington and several boutique festivals. Following the success of their single "So Unpredictable", the band plan to release and tour their debut album in 2013.

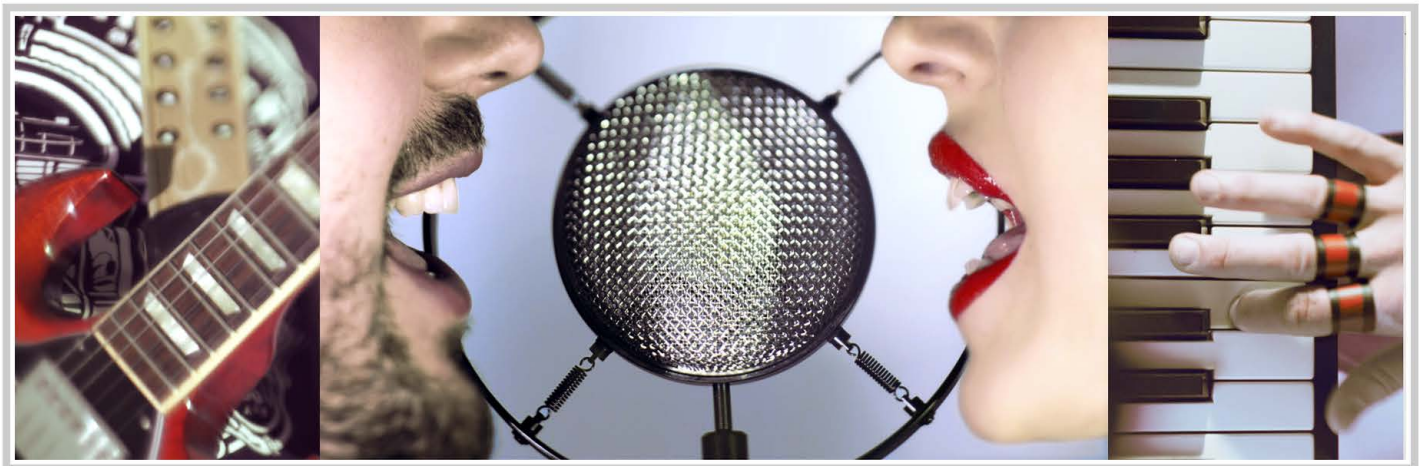

Reviews

'A glorious, pumping bass-led track from a set of musicians who clearly know what they're doing and where they're going' Pete Donaldson, Absolute Radio on "So Unpredictable"

'Without a doubt [Kentish Fire] have the most enthusiastic stage presence I have seen from a new band in a while' Strictly Reading and Leeds Festival blog

'Very, very catchy. Very catchy indeed...impossibly fun and frenetic, taking indie staples and rewriting them for the teenybopping generation' The 405 on "So Unpredictable" (Single of the Week)

'That perfect indie pop sound, with a disco underbelly...the Camden band have produced a cracking debut single with this' New Singles Review on "So Unpredictable"
